

For a better Mumbai...

We all keep dreaming of a better city — where the infrastructure is of international standards, the skyscrapers are environmentally friendly and come equipped with state-of-the-art amenities and most importantly, where a home fits our pocket. But these are men who make the dream a reality. Here are some industry experts who aspire to make this dream a reality:

“The builder community has a social responsibility to a city by adding value and vision to their projects. As in the past, some visionary developers can transform an entire neighbourhood.

Rohit Kumbhar

“Mumbai is the city for anyone who dares to dream. My vision for the city is probably backed by many others — a city at par with a Taiwan or Shanghai

“Since, Mumbai is the commercial heart of India with a cosmopolitan tag, I feel that the old city residents living in inhabitable and dilapidated condition deserve a better lifestyle

Dinesh J. Kuwadia

“We appreciate the government's effort in trying to create more infrastructure for the city. Being the financial capital, Mumbai has great demand for luxurious spaces and hence good infrastructure

Lakshman Bhagatani

“I would like Mumbai to be neat like some of the other cities of India, where there is greenery on both sides of the road and infrastructure develops much faster

Uday Dharmadhikari,
CEO, Usha Braco Realty Ltd

“One of the biggest challenges for Mumbai is inadequate infrastructure. Along with infrastructure, we also need a proper management system for the same
